The importance of promoting inclusion in higher education cannot be overstated. In recent years, there has been a growing recognition of the need to create learning environments that are diverse, equitable, and inclusive. According to the EU “Active inclusion means enabling every citizen, notably the most disadvantaged, to fully participate in society, including having a job” and it is considered one of the social rights among EU member states. As staff members in higher education, it is our responsibility to create and maintain inclusive learning environments that support the success of all students. This requires ongoing education and training to develop the necessary knowledge and skills to address systemic barriers, promote diversity and inclusion, and provide support for students from underrepresented groups.

This is the purpose of this international staff training week, apart from discovering a frequently unknown UGR campus on the northern coast of Africa, just across the Gibraltar Crossing and bordering Morocco. The UGR Ceuta campus is designed to meet the needs of a diverse student population, offering a range of academic programs in fields such as education, economics, IT engineering, and nursing. The Campus is currently home to two faculties, the Faculty of Education, Economics and Technology and the Faculty of Nursing, both of which will act as hosts for the participants.
